Task 1. Read a magazine article SCHOOL AROUND THE WORLD. (8 points)

) Match questions (1-8) with paragraphs (A-G). Write your answers (paragraph letters) on the line next to the question. There is an extra question which you do not need to use.

SCHOOL AROUND THE WORLD

A. Don't feel like going to school today? Well, you're lucky because 300 million children can't go to school. Unfortunately, most of these children live in developing countries and are very poor so they have to work. Sometimes their parents can't buy the books or the school uniform. For the 140 children living in the area around Alice Springs in Australia, getting to school can take days. Therefore, the School of the Air provides radio classes which children do at home.

B. How do children feel when they're at school? In the United States there have been many shootings in schools so most now have security checks for anyone entering the school. However, 70% of American students still don't feel safe in their schools!

C. All over the world some pupils have to wear school uniforms. Kamuzu Academy in Malawi, Africa, is a private school and the students have to wear straw hats and blazers. In Sepehr school, Tehran, Iran, the girls have to wear a blue dress. One student explains why she enjoys wearing a uniform, "Some girls wear something over their dress. However, I think there's a beauty in the whole school wearing the same thing." However, usually school uniforms are unpopular among young people who want to wear something more fashionable!

D. All schools have rules. At the Fenglou Acrobatics School in Wuqia, China, students have to work very hard "Students must not bring toys or games to the school," says Zhang Fenglou, the school's principal, "because they don't need them — they have no time for games." When pupils do something wrong, they have to do a handstand for half an hour. Most schools have a more relaxed attitude. At Windsor House School, North Vancouver, Canada, teachers, parents and students vote for the school rules.

E. In some schools religion plays a very important part in school life. At Sepehr School, Tehran, Iran, students get a point for every tenth visit to the prayer room and the pupils with the most points at the end of the month can stay at school for a party. In Israel, Jewish and Arab schoolchildren attend different schools. The Gan HaShalom school in Jaffa, Israel, is unique because half of the pupils and teachers are Jewish and half of them are Arab. The school principal is proud of his school. He says, "We cannot change the world. But when our pupils grow up, they will be able to meet an Arab or a Jew without feeling afraid or angry."

F. There are private schools all over the world. Amadu Monjeza, 12, attends Kamuzu Academy in Malawi. "Poor kids ask me for money and that makes me sad. I can see how they suffer outside the school." In Britain about 7% of children go to a private school. St Paul's School in New Hampshire, USA is one of the most expensive private boarding schools in the USA. St Paul's has two fields for American football, seven for soccer, two for field hockey and four for lacrosse as well as two indoor ice rinks, ten squash courts, eighteen tennis courts, an athletics track, a rowing lake and two ski courses!

G. In most countries, pupils study a wide range of subjects until the age of eighteen. In the UK, students specialise early, choosing three or four subjects at the age of sixteen. English is a very important subject for young people all over the world. In Cyprus many students have private lessons in the afternoon to help them get into British and American universities. However, in the US only 30% of high school students study a language (usually Spanish).

Which paragraph:

1. tells how students in some schools are encouraged to pray?
2. speaks about school disciplines and their importance?
3. describes sporting facilities in a school?
4. mentions some reasons why children don't attend school?
5. speaks about students' attitudes to the way they dress in school?
6. gives information about the future of schools?
7. gives an example of punishment for disobedience?
8. touches upon some dangers children can face at school?

Task 2. You are going to read a magazine article about Sean Connery.

(6 points)

Read and choose the best answer (A, B or C) to the question.

Sean Connery

Sean Connery has made over 70 films and is one of the top five movie actors in the world. But the well-known star was not born into a privileged theatrical family. On the contrary, he grew up in a working-class district of Edinburgh in Scotland during the Great Depression of the 1930s. "At that time, unemployment was high and most families were poor, so Sean and his parents were not unusual in living in a two-roomed flat with no bathroom. When his father was unemployed, young Sean, glad to help, would get up at dawn to earn some money delivering milk before he went to school. By the age of ten, he already had the determination to control his own destiny, something that he continued to do throughout his life.

Sean left school at thirteen and worked from dawn to dusk doing any jobs he could find. The milk round provided most of his income, though it was like a hobby for him, because he loved looking after Titch, the horse that pulled his milk cart. But as Sean approached his seventeenth birthday, he was keen to extend his experience of life beyond his work, football and local dances. Despite his parents' objections, he signed on for seven years with the Royal Navy, boasting to his friends that he was off to see the world.

But this was not to be. After a thorough and rigorous training programme, Sean was sent no further than the south coast of England. By then, he was already doubting whether the Navy was really the right thing for him. For such an independent young man, it was hard not to be allowed to think for himself. Although in the end he had to leave the Navy for medical reasons, he must have had mixed feelings about it. On the one hand, it was a lucky escape; on the other hand, it meant returning home with his tail between his legs and with only a small disability pension to live on.

After the Navy, there followed an unsettled period where he took on a variety of jobs in his home city. He delivered coal, and worked as a labourer and as a French polisher in a furniture business. In fact, he didn't mind what he did as long as the job paid him enough to subsidise his leisure pursuits, which now included bodybuilding. He even turned down the offer of a job with Manchester United Football Club on the grounds that it wouldn't leave him enough time or money for his other interests.

Gradually, thanks perhaps to those trips to the gym, his attractive appearance was opening up other areas of work. He became a lifeguard, did a bit of acting and worked as a fashion model for a magazine. The turning point, however, came when he entered the 'male beauty' competition known as Mr Universe. Although he didn't win, he was noticed and, on the strength of his looks alone, got a small part in the musical show South Pacific. Here he began to attract crowds of female admirers. His destiny was finally unfolding. Television plays followed, which then led on to films, both in Britain and the USA. A few years later, Sean would meet the man who was writing the screenplay for the first James Bond film Dr No. He saw in Sean Connery the perfect 007, a role that was to make the actor a household name the world over.

9. As a young child, Sean Connery's life was hard because

- A. he came from an unhappy family background.
- B. he was forced to do things he did not enjoy.
- C. he grew up at a time of economic problems.

10. Why did Sean decide to join the Navy?

- A. He wanted to get away from his life in Edinburgh.
- B. His parents thought it would be good for him.
- C. He couldn't find any other sort of work.

11. Why did Sean leave the Navy?

- A. He found it difficult to accept orders.
- B. He was no longer well enough to continue.
- C. He was disappointed not to be sent abroad.

12. What does the expression with his tail between his legs suggest about Sean?

- A. He was pleased to be going home to his friends and family.
- B. He realised he had made a mistake in joining the Navy.
- C. He was ashamed of the way he had behaved whilst away.

13. What was Sean's attitude to work in the period after he left the Navy?

- A. He was only interested in the money he could earn.
- B. He was only willing to do work that he enjoyed.
- C. He wanted to do jobs connected with his leisure pursuits.

14. Why was Sean chosen for a part in the musical show South Pacific?

- A. He came first in a competition.
- B. He had previous acting experience.
- C. His physical appearance impressed people.
